

Zhao Ming Soh's Branded Bio

I am currently studying for a Bachelor of Computer Science degree at the University of Adelaide. I am an enthusiastic person that has a strong sense of curiosity in learning from others, even if the tasks at hand are challenging and difficult, I will always put in all that I have in overcoming them. Investing and gaming have always been a passion of mine since I was a kid and I would like to apply the programming skills that I have attained such as data analysis and product development into these areas namely application developments and data modelling. As part of my academic curriculum, I had worked on a website called, "The Personal Trainer" with a diverse group of people in which I had learned a lot about interpersonal skills such as how to collaborate effectively in the coding department and how to convey messages across a group especially in such trying times and in doing so, we were able to meet deadlines. My ultimate career goal would be to be able to create applications that would enrich people's lives both mentally and financially.
